The daughter of nightclub musicians, Beth Hamon is a bicycle-riding, creative autodidact whose songs straddle the fuzzy line between Jewish and secular themes of justice, hope, renewal and love. Based in Portland, Oregon, she tours as an artist- and educator-in-residence and cantorial soloist at coffeehouses, community centers and synagogues across the country.

Beth was selected as one of the top five "New Voices In Jewish Music" by Forward magazine. She is in demand as a commissioned songwriter and clinician at music conferences and day-of-Jewish-learning events across the United States.

She holds a degree in Music Education (percussion) and Middle East Studies from Portland State University. Deeply concerned about the nationwide funding cuts in arts education, Beth also volunteers her time as a drum instructor at Portland-area elementary schools.

Beth's three recorded collections include liturgical settings and original compositions about life as experienced through an American-Jewish lens. She is at work on a fourth album of original Jewish folk music. <http://www.beth-hamon-music.com>
