RABBI'S REMARKS

Rabbi Mordecai Miller

A Living Sanctuary

For most of us, the notion of the Temple with animal sacrifices would seem, at best, primitive and, at worst, barbaric.

Personal feelings aside, a brief study of sources in the Torah (e.g. Leviticus), Mishnah, Talmud and other rabbinic writing leaves one with the strong impression that the Temple, Sacrificial system and related concepts represent an essential element in the original religion of Israel.

The practice of religion is the search to discover meaning despite our brief sojourn in this world. Consequently, a major factor, which gives our lives a sense of value, is the way religious practice allows us to link ourselves to past generations. We do this in rediscovering their stories through the Bible and practicing of the commandments—the mitzvot.

The stories give us insights into the human element; how to recognize behaviors that promote our welfare or lead to self-destruction. They also attempt to give us a perspective in which we can see the hand of our Divine Creator at work behind the turn of events. This can provide us with a sense of ultimate hope, despite our mortal struggle for existence.

Practicing the mitzvot represents a deep human response to our belief in an Ultimate Author of the Universe. This system of Divine Commandments is predicated on an assumption that, despite the brevity of our individual lives, the specific details of our daily experience have significance. For example, making a blessing—a b'racha—before eating, trains us to acknowledge the Ultimate Creator of that food; transforming that common act into an affirmation of our Creator's presence.

But how do we take these elements and bring them to bear on those practices that took place in the Temple? What relevance can those ancient rites have on our present-day lives?

Our early sages were only too aware of this puzzle. They developed a system of daily formal prayer that would reflect the offerings brought in the Temple.

The Torah itself may be silent on the subject of significance. It devotes itself to the how and not on the why (compare the question of the wise son in the Hagaddah). Yet, in studying and interpreting these passages, the Malbim, (Rabbi Meir Leibush, 1809–1879) shows how the configuration of the Mishkan (the Tabernacle that the Israelites erected and carried with them during their journey in the wilderness), and subsequently Solomon's Temple, can be seen to represent human anatomy!

“Where is God to be found? Wherever one allows God to enter.”

Menahem Mendel of Kotzk—The Kotzker rebbe

Specifically, the Holy of Holies represents the cranial cavity; the remaining parts of the Tent of Meeting represent the remaining parts of the face (with furniture accounting for our sense of sight, smell, taste and the bells on the edge of the priestly garments representing our auditory sense). Outside the Tent of Meeting, the altar, on which the sacrifices were burnt off, represents the human digestive tract.

This suggests that every human being has the potential of becoming a human Mishkan or Temple! The services performed in the Mishkan, which had to be executed with great care, represent the way in which to conduct our lives. These services were intended to serve as a way to acknowledge God and serve as a conduit to the Divine Presence. It was a place where God's Presence could be tangibly felt.

Likewise, when a person conducts their lives in a similar way they are capable of bringing the Presence of God into this world!

May you and the ones you love be blessed with such an experience!

Mazal Tov to our Bat Mitzvah, Mira Wegman

Jan. 11, 2014—Shabbat Beshalach

My name is Mira Wegman. I will become a Bat Mitzvah on January 11, 2014. My Torah portion is Beshalach which is from Exodus—the story of the Israelites leaving Egypt. I enjoy participating in the 13th Tribe and Chaverim. When I'm not studying, I enjoy playing piano which I have done for six years. I am in student leadership at Slater Middle School where I'm on the volleyball and track teams. I also play on an indoor soccer team. I don't have much down time, but when I do I like to hang out with my best friends who live next door. I want to express my appreciation to Rabbi Miller for helping me understand this parsha, and to my father for helping me prepare for my Bat Mizvah. I hope you will be able to join us for this special day on January 11th.

PRESIDENT'S PAGE

Arnold Drake, President

Recently Rabbi Miller and I attended a conference on the Modern Synagogue, sponsored by our local Jewish Federation. (When you are a synagogue President, or a Rabbi, you attend a lot of these.)

This conference described The Connected Congregation. There are three types of congregations: First is the Jewish Journey: congregants may come and go, and may have certain needs which will be financed on a fee-for service basis: life cycle events, adult and children's Jewish education, etc. This is what I think a traditional synagogue, like ours, practices.

A new form of synagogue is the Mishkan, where all congregants "build the community with varied and personal resources." Some do not have a rabbi. Perhaps some of our local non-affiliated Jewish groups function on this basis.

The third form of course is the hybrid of the two.

All three types of congregations are to practice "Relational Judaism: Where all (congregants) know and are known; (where they are) a community of communities." They are to practice "Radical Hospitality: No boundaries; all are fully included." (From a comment, I think this refers to Gay and lesbian Jews.) "Financial Transparency: Congregants know where the money goes." (All congregants at Beth Ami have the Annual Budget available at the Annual meeting.) There is also to be "Positive Talk about Money: There is an atmosphere of safety, abundance and trust." And there must be a "Clear and Compelling Purpose: The clear vision of the community inspires (us to do our best)."

While all congregations should always try to relate to all of the congregants all of the time, the heart of the new arrangements is what has come to be called a Fair Share dues system. You look at your own personal income, and make a donation in the amount of your income. Each synagogue draws up its own income and dues levels, and each member is requested to pay that amount.

This idea has been around for a while. Some synagogues have tried it with success. Other synagogues have tried this system with disastrous results. We are not planning on discussing this at this time, but we might discuss this idea at next year's Board retreat. In the meantime, all synagogues are to look at new and novel ways of engaging congregants.

Your Board of Directors will continue to look at new ways to improve our kehilla. We will always involve you in the discussion.

I hope that everyone will have a joyous Channukah, and a healthy and happy secular New Year.

NURSERY SCHOOL NOTES

Caroline Calvert & Robyn Fisher-Tachouet
Nursery School Co-Directors

During the first week of November, our Nursery School children had the opportunity to make challah with our most esteemed master challah maker, Irwin Margolese. The children delighted in the challah man dancing with his special chef hat (yarmulke on top to boot!) followed by a show and tell. He had the kids touching and smelling the different ingredients that go into the challah. The children got to roll their challah dough into “snakes.” Each child was given another two to learn to braid the special bread. The children got a real kick out of painting their challahs with egg and adding a topping—sesame seeds, cinnamon and/or sugar. The challahs were baked and bagged to take home. If you were lucky enough to be in the Social Hall, the smells were absolutely fantastic! The children have already asked if the challah man is coming again. Thank you so much, Irwin!

We also want to send a very special thank you to the Soup Sistas. We have had a few families in need who were delighted to receive soup and challah. They have been extremely touched by such a caring and loving community. Your efforts have not gone unnoticed; we sincerely appreciate it.

We are busily preparing for our annual Chanukah Guest play. Won't the kids be delighted to see their teacher dressed up as the main characters! It's a charming story of mistaken identity from the perspective of a sweet elderly Bubbie. A wonderful potluck will follow. We appreciate the opportunity to gather together outside the classroom and reflect on the extreme sweetness of this holiday.

Another note... We held our Kindergarten Informational Evening with representation from public and private schools. It was a great chance to have families come and ask specific questions about both Kindergarten and Transitional Kindergarten.

Our Nursery School Treasure

Irwin Margolese

For those who know and would like to hear again, there is a treasure in our midst. The treasure is our Nursery School filled with the most beautiful children.

Last week they experienced a challah making class. It was wonderful. They were wonderful. They learned about spices. They learned about flour. About eggs. About sesame seeds. All about the ingredients comprising a challah. And finally, they got to make 3” dough snakes. Lastly, they braided, painted their prizes with egg wash, sprinkled on sesame seeds, cinnamon, and sugar. The 3 braided challahs (snakes) were baked in our Beth Ami kitchen and taken home to show their families.

It was a joyous experience to be repeated by many students, parents, teachers in the near future.

A special thanks goes to Lauren Kalmanson. She coordinated, managed, directed, and promulgated the entire program! I know that we are grateful to Lauren because this event would not have gone so well without her energy and love met out to all who participated!

And I? I, the newly appointed Challah Man with my chef's hat topped with a pink yarmulke, am grateful for this most wonderful event.

RELIGIOUS SCHOOL REPORT

Pnina Loeb, Religious School Director

The point of Abraham taking Isaac up the mountain is to take him up, to reach the place where G-d appears to him, not to sacrifice him, but to take him higher. And by doing so we are to take ourselves higher as well.

We often hear commands wrong; especially when they concern the people and causes we love most, and call on us to give a lot of ourselves. We always have to be sure that it is G-d and Torah we follow, rather than faddish trends on the one hand, or sheer inertia on the other. Let's listen hard to pay attention to the warning that we not sacrifice our children's Judaism in order to preserve our current notion of how things have to be. The Rabbis justified a lot in the name of va-hai ba-hem, the command to live through Judaism and not die, and make sure that Judaism lives through us. What a blessing it is to have this moment, when so many of us are ready for that journey, and to have one another, companions on the path of Judaism, to help at every turn on the way. The future awaits us. Let's talk, keep moving and celebrating life!

MITZVAH MOMENTS

Tish Levee

Judaism's greatest commandment is P'kuach Nefesh—Saving a Life, superseding all others. In November, National Donor Shabbat month, I asked you to register as an organ donor. This month I'd like to you to consider being a living donor.*

A Tale of Two Kidneys

In 2005 at the Rosh Hashana, Rabbi Schlesinger announced that a congregant's father needed a kidney. Five CBA members came forth as potential donors for Richard Lazovick's father, Paul. In 2006, I was privileged to be his donor. Many of you are aware of this and know that, as a result, Paul's quality of life dramatically improved, as did his longevity. Richard, and Paul's two daughters weren't able to be donors; they shared the same genetic marker for a rare kidney disease with Paul. Now, seven years later, Richard has that disease and is in need of a kidney himself.

At the time, Rabbi Schlesinger said that a person could live very well with only one kidney—he had been doing it since he was twelve. If you remember his cross-country bicycle ride you know how true that was. I agree as I'm in excellent health, having no ill effects from being a donor when I was 66. Donating a kidney is easy; it's performed laproscopically with a very short hospital stay. Most people can return to work in a few weeks. Living donors get a comprehensive checkup to make certain they are in good physical and mental health. The costs of all the tests and the operation are covered by the recipient's insurance; there is no cost to the donor.

The very best option for a person with chronic kidney failure is a new kidney from a living donor. Next best is one from a deceased donor. Richard is on a list for that, but the waiting list is about eight years. Dialysis is the least favorable option. It's very hard physically, requires many hours a week, reduces life expectancy, and increases the risk of later transplant's rejection.

A living kidney will last twice as long as one from a deceased donor. It usually starts functioning immediately (Paul's new kidney was putting out urine in the operating room), whereas someone receiving a kidney from a deceased donor may require dialysis until the new kidney begins functioning.

Please consider helping save Richard's life and ask others to do so. For more information, go to www.akidneyforrichard.com/ or call Richard at 707-981-4409.

For information about living donation, you can also go to the National Kidney Foundation site at www.kidney.org/transplantation/livingdonors/index.cfm.

*"...no posek (Jewish religious authority) today forbids live kidney donation, and many, though stopping short of declaring it obligatory, encourage donation and consider it to be an extraordinary mitzvah." (www.ou.org/results?q=kidney+donation#.UoZRBiiGhSV and www.ou.org/results?q=kidney)

Bob Raful

Over the years we have been delighted to hear/read stories of a first trip to Israel by young people we know—USY, Birthright, etc. Rarely have we spoken to adults about a first trip. So, I must share this story with you. A 65-year “young” couple (extended family) are in Israel on a SoCal Federation trip, which they preceded with several pre-trip days. She is a retired school administrator, EdD—i.e. she writes well—here are some excerpts from her journal:

“Today began by driving to Jerusalem to the Mount of Olives where (guide) gave us quite a history lesson as we overlooked the entire city. The Chagall Windows at the Hadassah Hospital were a beautiful treat. Next we spent the remainder of the afternoon at Yad Vashem. Needless to say, we were emotionally spent by the end of our visit.

We were on our own today and our plan worked! The highlight—the current King Herod Israel Museum Exhibit and the model of Jerusalem and the second temple—is spectacular. The Dead Sea Scroll building is architecturally impressive. Tonight our SoCal Group joins us.

Standing at the Western Wall was far more emotional for us than either of us imagine. Whether or not you conceptualize that God is everywhere or at the Western Wall or in your heart—the historical magnificence of being there is nothing that we could have anticipated. Being on top of Masada and listening to the story of King Herod, the Romans and standing on this architectural phenomenon is a bit overwhelming.

Without a doubt a highlight of the past few days was walking in the tunnels underneath the Western Wall. Believe it or not, our tour began at 10 p.m. and we walked until 11:30 p.m. and were wide awake and fascinated by the experience. Last night we spent the night on a kibbutz resort on the Sea of Galilea—Safed is an artist community where we bought a unique menorah, incredible candles and some nice gifts. We were in the Golan Heights, Jordan River, Lebanon, Syria—the countries are all so close together.

Never in a million years did we expect to buy an oil painting of the Western Wall but that is exactly what we did. We were BOTH so moved by our experiences. Throughout our lives we have faced the West in Temple when we pray but not until we were standing at the wall, down in the tunnels, seeing people praying at midnight after having gone to Masada, the Bullet factory, the Palmach Museum, Caesarea, and listened to the history at Independence Hall, the Israel Museum, etc. did we begin to understand the struggle of our Jewish people. But hearing the history and walking the sites in Israel raises many questions and stimulates your mind into a curiosity I haven’t had about Israel and Jews before now.”

Conclusion—Plan a trip to Israel!

LITERARY LINES

Gabor Por, Librarian

I am happy to report that the library added dozens of books to its collection. To show the scope of the new addition let me introduce three different kind of books that are now available for borrowing: a novel, a theological exploration and a collection of short stories.

Dalia Rabinovich's book, Flora's suitcase, is from 1998 combines magical realism with a funny family saga as it follows a Jewish couple's emigrant life in Colombia. If you read it you will be exposed to delicate issues of culture clash between Colombian and American traditions, and between modern Jews and their conservative Russian emigre relations.

The title of Rabbi Elie Kaplan Spitz is Does the Soul Survive? Its subtitle is even more telling: A Jewish journey to belief in afterlife, past lives & living with purpose. The book explores a lot of related topics, including near death experiences and the big question of what is the nature of our existence. Lawrence Kushner found it "a wise, moving, carefully thought out and provocative first-person exploration in the immortality of the soul." I couldn't sum it up any better.

Etgar Keret's The Girl on the Fridge contains 46 short stories, none of them longer than 5 pages. His characters are vivid and the stories sometimes are dark, so it is not for everyone. But if you enjoy though-provoking situation and stories verging on the edge of absurd you will find this book a delight. Keret is considered one of the most important writer working in Israel right now. Immerse yourself in his world.

We have many more new books and thousands of others in our collection waiting to be read, studies, enjoyed, argued with. Pick your pleasure.

On a personal note: your humble librarian started a blog where several times a day shares news and links about Jewish book. So if you cannot get enough of the topic or want to be on the top of this world check out jewishbook-world.tumblr.com.

ADULT EDUCATION

Make A Scene At Beth Ami

Rabbi Danzig helps us dramatize Biblical characters

Tuesdays, 7–8:30 p.m., November 12, 19, 26; December 3 in classrooms 12–13

A View From The Stage

This course explores how biblical heroes and myths evolved onto the theater stage. John Milton (17th century), auto-biographically in Samson Agonistes. In the 18th century, Haydn orchestrates the first chapter of Genesis in his oratorio, The Creation. In the 20th century, Genesis is treated by Arthur Miller in his play The Creation of the World and Other Business; Noah is the pathetic hero in Clifford Odets' The Flowering Peach; in J.B., Archibald MacLeish develops a contrasting study to the biblical Job. The selection of the plays will be presented as reader's theater. Students will be asked to volunteer to do the dramatic readings, coached by Rabbi Danzig.

Express Your Informed Opinion On Current Jewish Topics

Tuesdays 10–11:30 a.m., Starting November 6 in the Multi-Purpose room

Beth Ami members lead discussions of articles and issues from J Magazine; CJ; Hadasab or other Jewish journals copies of which will be made available to students. Attendees will have read the selected articles before each class (except the first) and will be welcome to select articles of interest to them discussion of which they would be willing to moderate.

WHAT'S COOKING WITH THE KITCHEN COMMITTEE?

Jeffrey & Janet Stein-Larson (Co-Chairs)

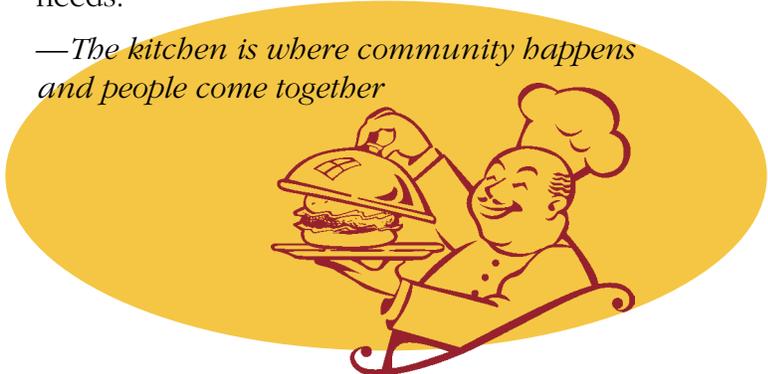

We have had a lot to be thankful for over the last few months. Thanks to Richard Kahn, we now have a small fan and more ventilation in the kitchen. It brings down the temperature from what has been in hot weather, in the 90s when first entering the kitchen; to a lower 82–84 degrees. This will extend the life of our refrigerator and freezer. And guess what else has changed again thanks to Richard...we now have a light in the refrigerator (and did you notice we didn't have one before?) Mark Rosen decided we needed a better egg slicer so he donated one. We've had an anonymous donation of a 3-pot slow cooker buffet set. Rick Concoff and the Chaverim donated a new microwave. Ruth and Ira Rosenberg donated some kitchen cookware and warmer plates. Ahuva Simon-Sa'ar donated a toaster oven, strainer, grater, and slicer. Thank you all for thinking of the CBA kitchen!

What's been happening in the Beth Ami Kitchen over the last couple of months? We have been very busy. Besides the challah baking for our Shabbats, there was also a Nursery School Challah baking class. We've had our regular Family Shabbat dinners, and we also had some Rockin' Shabbat dinners. Our pot-lucks after Shabbat services have been amazing, and we've had a couple of extra special Simcha Shabbat celebrations. The CBA Soup Sisters have made more soup for distributing. There have also been Beth Ami and You programs, Beth Ami lectures, and classes involving Beth Ami Kitchen. By the time you read this, you may also add on Avi's Bar Mitzvah, the Scholar-in-Residence program and a couple of latke making sessions for both the Nursery School and Beth Ami Hanukah Party.

A big thank you to all of you who made this possible; the members of the Kitchen Committee, all of our mashgichim volunteers, all the event volunteers (organizers, preparers and cleaners), and all of our Beth Ami members who are supporting us. With your continued help, you are helping to make the Beth Ami Kitchen more open to our congregation's needs.

—The kitchen is where community happens and people come together

SOCIAL ACTION SCOOP

Lyla Nathan

It is hard to believe that when you read this article Chanukah will almost be over. It has been a very busy time with the holidays coming so early this year. So for most of us, December will be a quiet month and perhaps a good time to help those in need. I know there is always need to help with toys and food distribution at the fairgrounds as well as serving meals on or around Christmas time.

The Social Action Committee is planning on volunteering at the Redwood Empire Food Bank on Mon., Dec. 9th from 5–7. Please let me know if you can make it. Call Lyla at 526-7438 or Lizzy at the office at 360-3000. If you can't make it on that date you can walk in most anytime from to help. They are always in need of help.

We have been busy helping with the JFCS food pantry supplying fresh fruit and vegetables and frozen items from the Redwood Empire food Bank.

The Congregation continues to be very generous in supplying staples to the pantry. Thank you all so much. There is a great need at this time of the year. Please continue to bring items to the synagogue. They especially need the following items:

- Canned tuna or chicken
- Peanut butter
- Canned chili or beans
- Mac-n-cheese
- Gluten free products
- Tea bags
- Canned fruit (low sugar)
- Small hygiene products: toothpaste, shampoos, individually wrapped toilet paper

We are co-sponsoring the winter clothing drive with Shomrei Torah. Thanks to everyone who brought such good clothing for those who are homeless during these cold winter night. You can continue to bring clothes through Dec. 15th.

The Soup Sisters also has made delicious mushroom barley soup with little challahs from nurse Susan Miller and Irvin Margolese. please contact the office if you or someone you knows is in need of some TLC.

The SAC and Rockin Shabbat just had a very successful Friday Night dinner and service and oneg. There were over 120 people in attendance and the sound of young voices and the acappella choir Kol Ha Dov certainly lit up the social hall and sanctuary. Everyone was thrilled to see so many young families here at Beth Ami. The evening was a celebration and honoring of the Interfaith Families in our community. We thanked them and will continue to appreciate how they are vital to Beth Ami's community .

The event was part of a Bay Area celebration of interfaith families. The sponsoring organization is Interfaith Families based in SF whose main purpose is to encourage the Jewish community to be inclusive and welcoming to interfaith families.

We want to thank everyone who came to the Shabbat. And give special thanks to the Rockin Shabbat Beth Ami and You committee (Sara Miller, Barb McGee, Barbara Tomin, Pnina Loeb, and Ronit Glickman) who has brought such wonderful entertainment and provided such a wonderful potato bar.

Tomorrow, a few members are going to an informative dinner at the Tamayo Village (a housing facility of SAY, Social Advocates for Youth). We will meet with SAY staff and some of the youth that live there and learn more about the proposed Dream Center.
